MATERIAL PRICING: The commodity lumber markets finished the week lower on most items, as never ending cold and wet weather in many areas of the country continue to limit contractor demand. Several SPF producers announced permanent and temporary mill curtailments to help hold pricing, but that had little effect on pricing or sales volume. Fir dimensional moved lower, with the exception of 2x12, which moved up double digits on limited availability. SYP dimensional continued slipping lower, with production outpacing demand. Panel markets were mostly unchanged for the week. OSB was flat in most regions, as was Fir plywood. SYP plywood remained firm for the week, but continues to search for a trading level. As always, keep your bids current.

Windows & Doors—Many customers are updating their homes or building their new homes in a contemporary style. There are many windows and doors to keep up with this trend. Stop by our showroom to see the many options available, including—black interior and/or exterior windows, square sticking on windows, flat panel exterior doors, and a wide variety of interior door options to suit every style. Stair parts are also following this trend, offering cable rail systems for an industrial look as well as several other contemporary looks. And don't forget the hardware; from levers to glass knobs there are many styles to choose.
